The Cleaning Up.

The Health Officers have been thoroughly over the city and a list has been made of all places that need sanitary attention and they will be thoroughly cleaned and disinfected no matter whose premises they are on.

It is gratifying to state that at most places the officers were received in a hospitable manner. All reflecting citizens realize the importance of cleanliness and are in hearty accord with the officials. Cholera or no cholera it will be beneficial to the general health of the people to give the city a good cleaning.

BROOKSHIRE, the murderer, has reached the Frankfort Penitentiary. The place is familiar to him, he having been sent up four years ago for burglary.

At the reunion of naval veterans in Baltimore last Friday, a gallant old tar belonging to Farragut Association created great enthusiasm by offering a resolution asking the President to stop immigration for a term of ten years, until those already here became naturalized or civilized, especially regarding the laws of health.

ROQUEFORT AND ITS CHEESE

The Town's Beauty Has Been Injured by Its Chief Industry.

Cheese, which has been the fortune of Roquefort, has destroyed its picturesqueness. It has brought speculators there who have raised great, ugly, square buildings of dazzling whiteness in harsh contrast with the character and somber tone of the old houses. Although the place is so small that it consists of only one street and a few alleys, the more ancient dwellings are remarkable for their height. It is surprising to see in a village lost among the sterile hills houses three stories high. The fact that there is only a ledge on which to build must be the explanation. What is most curious in the place is the cellars. Before the cheese became an important article of commerce these were natural caverns, such as are everywhere to be found in this calcareous formation, but now they are really cellars that have been excavated to such a depth in the rock that they are to be seen in as many as five stages, where long rows of cheese are stacked one over the other. The virtue of these cellars, from the cheese-making point of view, is their dryness and their scarcely varying temperature of about eight degrees centigrade summer and winter.

But the demand for Roquefort cheese has become so great that trickery now plays a part in the ripening process, says Temple Bar. The peasants have learned that "time is money," and they have found that bread crumbs mixed with the curd causes those green streaks of moldiness, which denote that the cheese is fit for the market, to appear much more readily than was formerly the case, when it was left to do the best it could for itself with the aid of a subterranean atmosphere. This is not exactly cheating; it is commercial enterprise, the result of competition and other circumstances too strong for poor human nature. In cheese-making, bread crumbs are found to be a cheap substitute for time; and it is said that those who have taken to beer brewing in this region have found that box, which here is the commonest of shrubs is a cheap substitute for hops. The notion that brass pins are stuck into Roquefort cheese to make it turn green is founded on fiction.

The Old-Time Pew.

In days of old when much distinction was had in meeting houses the spelling of our word pew was pure. In French it was pue, in Spanish it was pue, a bench; in Latin it was podium, a balcony or elevated place next to the arena where the emperor sat, and in Greek it was pous, the foot—and in all cases where the feet of the worshiper rested—a raised place on the floor of the church where one might sit or might stand or might kneel. In Puritan meeting houses the choice pews were round about the walls, one step up, and the deacons' seats near the pulpit two steps up, and those of the ruling elders one step higher yet. In these latter days the best pews are in the center of the church—the wall pews fetch less price.
